Autonomy & Attachment & the life integration process (LIP)

INTERNATIONAL NELLES INSTITUTE SUMMER COURSE
25 to 31 August 2024, Grasse - France

The two basic human drives are the desire to be autonomous, and the desire to relate to others. Romantic relationships, friendships, family relations, and work confront us with the challenge of distinguishing and connecting the two.

What lies at the core of our desire to be autonomous, and what kind of attachment is nourishing and what kind is suffocating? Is there a space where we can combine the two and feel whole, or are we condemned to a life of oscillating ambivalence? In this summer course we present the life integration process and its tangible and phenomenological perspective on these issues. And the power of LIP is not in our actions as teachers and constelators but in the power and reality of life itself. Against that lived experience no thought or mental concept can stand.

This summer course is developed for and aimed at all internationally oriented experienced coaches, consultants, and managers with a reflective poise. It is one of the few yearly LIP courses in English.

It consists of a foundation in the theory and practice of LIP, a species of systemic work that has gotten international acclaim but is still considered an insider's tip in this field.

LIP

LIP is not only a constellation method, using the "theory" and practice of systemic work, but it is also a holistic approach to self-knowledge in three dimensions.

- A therapeutic one in the sense that we support the client in taking into his or her consciousness what emerges or is hidden in psychological problems.
- It is an initiation in the sense that it reflects the soul potential of the client.
- And finally, a spiritual perspective in which we see life as a movement of the soul of which the individual is only an expression. In this attitude, therapy and the transition into adulthood are not processes that we do, but only something that we can allow into our consciousness. They ultimately happen by themselves.

The LIP approach fundamentally differs from the knowledge acquired at a university. It is a valuable add-on for any coach or consultant as it uses mind, body, and soul.

The LIP constellation results from Wilfried Nelles' theory of the development of human consciousness and the seven stages of life and consciousness described therein. We mainly but not exclusively work with the LIP format, that is, the constellation of the life stages of the unborn child, child, and adolescent.

The program will consist daily of a lecture, questions and answers and constellation work with the participants. Every personal or professional topic participants are interested in or are stuck with can be observed with this method. The summer course is set up as an open process in which we follow the structure but adapt to the flow of the process whenever that seems appropriate.

The program requires a minimum group of 20 participants.
